Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Tuesday 30 Mar 2021

UK Outlook for Sunday 4 Apr 2021 to Tuesday 13 Apr 2021:
This period begins with cold and unsettled conditions in the far north spreading south, with outbreaks of rain and cloudy conditions being seen by most by the end of the Sunday. Cold conditions mean that some of these outbreaks have the potential to turn wintry down to low levels, particularly across northern regions - particularly in Scotland and northern England. This general picture continues for a time, though any snow will most likely become restricted to any higher ground later. Later towards the end of this period, however, mixed weather patterns begin to evolve meaning that although showers and longer spells of rain are still likely some drier interludes are also likely. Temperatures are also likely to return to closer to average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.